

EXPLOSION
ON A RIVER TUGRear Cap of Heater on "Fred Nellis" Blows Out.

ENGINEER SMITH WILL DIE

BEGGED HIS MATE TO THROW
HIM IN MISSISSIPPI.

Fireman Narrowly Escaped—Second

Accident on the Little Boat in Two Weeks—Capt. James Phillips' Explanation.

By the explosion of a heater on the tug "Fred Nellis" Tuesday morning Engineer James H. Smith was fatally injured and the boat was disabled.

Smith, who was scalded by escaping steam and suffered fractures of the skull and of an arm from flying pieces of iron, was taken to the City Hospital.

Physicians say that he cannot recover. The accident is the second which has happened to the "Fred Nellis" within two weeks. The boat had been undergoing repairs and its first trip for 12 days was made Monday.

As the tug was approaching the foot of Tyler street Tuesday, where it was to take a barge of the American Sand Co. in tow, the rear cap of one of the boiler heaters, between the boiler and the engine, blew out with a loud report.

Engineer Smith had been standing at the throttle as the cap of the heater flew from its place. Fireman Dan Egan, who was on the forward deck, 20 feet distant, went back to find the room full of steam and the engineer scalded and bleeding on the floor.

A heavy cap of iron had struck Smith on the head, and an iron pipe, which had been dislodged by the explosion, had broken his arm. He was in intense suffering and appealed to Capt. James Phillips and his comrades to throw him into the river.

The boat, which was only a short distance from the shore, had sufficient momentum to reach the river, and within 25 minutes after the accident Smith was on his way to the City Hospital in an ambulance.

His Cap Blown Twenty Feet.

Smith's cap, which he was wearing before the explosion, was found near where he fell.

On the upper deck, where Cook J. M. Gal-lanar was preparing breakfast, the stove was shaken from its place and cooking utensils were scattered.

Martin Keller, one of the firemen, and Albert Hebeck and Theodore Uphoff, deck hands, were on board, but were out of the range of the explosion.

The "Fred Nellis" is 25 years old and is of 57 tons burden. Two weeks ago the front cap of the boiler blew off and Engineer John Gillan had a narrow escape from injury. The boat then laid up for repairs, resuming its trips only on Monday.

Capt. Phillips says that the rear cap of the heater, which blew off, was cracked, but that the crack was covered by a clamp and that the arrangement was considered a perfectly safe one.

The boat carries a certificate of government inspection good until March 23, 1902. The maximum pressure allowed, according to the certificate, is 150 pounds. Members of the crew say that the pressure at the time of Tuesday's explosion was 135 pounds.

Smith's home is in Vincennes, Ind., and his boarding place in St. Louis is at 1301 Washington avenue. He is single.

James Short, owner of the "Fred Nellis," visited the scene two hours after the accident. He said that the loss, aside from that sustained by the boat, was not great and that the crew for at least a week to come, would be slight.

TEACHERS' HATS TOO LARGE

St. Clair County Institute Turns From the Costless Man Question to the Problem of Hatted Women.

Hats are bothering the St. Clair County school teachers in their annual institute at Belleville more this year than coats bothered them last year.

Last year there was very hot weather while the institute was in session. The male teachers sweated in coats, while the ladies were cool in shirtwaists. A motion was made to permit the gentlemen to remove their coats. After a spirited discussion the motion was carried, all but one of the women voting for it.

This year the weather is not so hot that coats are uncomfortable, but a plague of big hats has settled down on the institute, to the great annoyance of teachers of both sexes. The paragon of the opera, a flower garden, looks, from the stage, like a flower garden. Some of the ladies do not wear hats, but they are hidden by the hats of their sisters.

When Prof. Black of Normal arose to address the institute the first time the hats disturbed him, and he called out to the ladies behind the first row. The teachers in the back rows were dodging and ducking and seemed to be playing peek-a-boo with the professor.

He remarked that there seemed to be more visitors and teachers and explained that he could tell them apart because the teachers usually went without their hats at institutes.

None of the teachers removed their hats and after passing for a moment the professor said he could stand the hats if those behind them could be playing peek-a-boo.

Tuesday the hats were again in evidence, but there was a report that before adjournment Tuesday afternoon a motion would be made by one of the men that the ladies be permitted to remove their hats. It was argued by some of the men that this was no more than a fair return for the magnanimity shown by the men last year in permitting the men to remove their coats.

THE OCTOPUS,
Frank Norris' Great Story.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

The wheat growers in Tulsa County, Okla., are at war with the P. & O. Railroad, which imports wheat from the coast by rail.

The railroad, on whose wheat lands the ranchers hold an option, demands an exorbitant price for the land and says it will be sold over the ranchers' heads if necessary. The wheat growers form a league, and the Magnus Derrick for president, to fight the road.

Loyan Derrick (Magnus' son, whom the League have elected Railroad Commissioner to uphold their interests) is to report progress in the fight against the railroad.

He proves to have been bought over by the railroad, and one of the ranch owners, who knows him down, tells him so.

The League, editor of the local paper owned by the railroad, blackmailed Magnus by threatening to expose the fact that Magnus secured Lyman's election by bribery.

Dyke, a former engineer, ruined by the railroad, tries to rob the League, but is captured by the posse and is befriended by Annixter, who lends to the fugitive his best horse.

Dyke takes refuge on a detached railroad engine. The posse pursues him to another engine.

After a fierce fight Dyke is captured. During a sort of picnic, where most of the League members are gathered, the Railroad attempts to seize some of the ranches.

The rest of the League would have the hour of danger; but the remainder prepare to resist the encroachment of the road's agents.

CHAPTER XVII. The Battle.

O. STEPHAN cooked his revolver and, in the profound silence that had fallen upon the scene, the click was plainly audible from end to end of the line.

"Remember our agreement, gentlemen," cried Magnus, in a warning voice. "O. Stephaan, I must ask you to let down the hammer of your weapon."

No one answered. In absolute quiet, standing motionless in their places, the League watched the approach of the marshal.

Five minutes passed. The riders came steadily. They drew nearer. The grind of the buggy wheels in the dirt and dust of the road and the prolonged clatter of the horses' feet began to make itself heard.

The League could distinguish the faces of the enemy.

In the buggy were S. Behrman and Cyrus Ruggles, the latter driving. A tall man in a frock coat and slouch hat—the marshal, beyond question, rode at the left of the buggy, Delaney carrying a Winchester at the right. Christian, the real estate broker, rode behind the marshal, and the three ranchers, who, with the exception of Brederwood, were the oldest men in the League, rode in front of him.

Steadily the distance between the League and the posse diminished. "Don't let them get too close, governor," whispered Harran.

When S. Behrman's buggy was about one hundred yards distant from the irritating clatter of the posse, the latter began to leave his revolver behind him. He beckoned at the posse, and the posse followed, and the three ranchers, who, with the exception of Brederwood, were the oldest men in the League, rode in front of him.

Magnus cried aloud: "Halt where you are!"

From their places in the ditch, Annixter, O. Stephaan, and Theodore Uphoff, deck hands, were on board, but were out of the range of the explosion.

The "Fred Nellis" is 25 years old and is of 57 tons burden. Two weeks ago the front cap of the boiler blew off and Engineer John Gillan had a narrow escape from injury. The boat then laid up for repairs, resuming its trips only on Monday.

MANY SOLDIERS CONVERTED

Epworth Leaguers Doing Effective Work at Jefferson Barracks and Also at the Spruce Street Mission.

Twenty-five soldiers were converted at a religious service held at Jefferson Barracks Monday evening by members of the Epworth League of the Cook Avenue Methodist Church, Episcopal.

There were addresses by George W. Hughes and Alexander H. Robbins, who converted with a Bible or New Testament.

The soldiers showed great interest in these services, which are held every Monday night. They have requested the young men to continue the services through the winter.

Another band of young men from the same church, led by William O. Andrews, is doing gratifying work at the Spruce Street Mission, having charge of the meetings once a week. This is mainly rescue work. Last week two young women were taken from evil surroundings and placed in homes in the West End.

These young people, says a member of the Cook Avenue Church, have almost entirely abandoned social pleasures and engagements in their desire to do something to uplift fallen men and women.

"How to Play Minor League Baseball."

By a National League Player.

That was the show at League Park Monday night being designated.

As to which team performed the office of illustrating the subject, there is no distinction. Both Pittsburgh and St. Louis filled the part at times.

There was minor league pitching and minor league fielding and minor league headwork. The only thing that passed beyond the substratum of worse than mediocrity, was the batting of Pittsburgh. That reached its majority early in the game and is entitled to full recognition as the only consistently first-class feature of the contest.

There were bright spots in the individual work of both teams. Donovan made a pretty catch, Wallace and Wagner of the Pirates drew some good plays. But their work stands out from the rest.

Harper's pitching was excusable. In addition to mediocre support, he went into the game handicapped by a lame arm. He was the game pitcher, was uncertain whether he would allow his star pitcher to risk his arm in what promised to be a hard contest, however, he pitched.

Charles pitched good ball for two innings, when his speed let down and the enemy got to him. Eight hits were made off his delivery in the last three innings he pitched. Sudhoff, who replaced him, was hit hard and lost control of his arm. At that time, Mr. Doherty remained in the box for the rest of the game.

It is no certainty that the visitors would have won with the pitcher who was hit by the Cardinals. The Cardinals' pitcher, who was hit by the Cardinals, was hit by the Cardinals.

For St. Louis, the game was literally thrown away. It was in the third inning, but the pitcher, who was hit by the Cardinals, was hit by the Cardinals.

Harper started the throwing by trying to hit the pitcher, who was hit by the Cardinals, was hit by the Cardinals.

He saw how things were going and started for second, hoping Mr. Ryan would join the brigade of high throwers. Ryan did not throw high—he threw about four miles, more or less, and the Cardinals were not allowed to take extra bases.

It was thought that Pittsburgh might perpetrate some series of blunders that would enable the Cardinals to crawl up with them. But after Phillips started, it became apparent that nothing short of the annihilation of the Cardinals was available.

They touched the bases up but sparsely, and in six innings made but two runs off his curves. Wallace, Heidrick and Kruger, Donovan were the only batters to hit him safely. St. Louis made more hits in three innings off Doherty than it did off Phillips in the entire game.

In the second market made the hit of the day. Bill Schriver had been substituted for Harper at bat. He selected a choice easy one and hammered it for a home run, reaching third after a game strike. But he was next up. He did not even wait to pick his ball, but slammed one of the first up far down in the region of the clubhouse and jogged around the bases. Schriver got home all right.

Burkert will be coming after the extra-base record if he continues hitting the ball as he has in the past few days.

St. Louis gathered in two other scores in the sixth and eighth innings. The first resulted from a single by Donovan, an error by Leach and a home run by Wallace. The second was on Heidrick's double, an infield out and Kruger's run.

The agony of the Pittsburgh scoring is too excruciating to detail. It came for the most part on hits, and in the third when the runs were almost entirely accounted for by errors. The hits were then, but the side should have been better before the men making them were due to bat.

A letter of advice to the St. Louis management might read: "Let Ryan have a rest and use Schriver behind the bat."

Ryan is sick and overworked. Schriver has been catching and batting well, and even if slow gets on base frequently or brings in men already there.

MICHAEL SMASHED RECORDS

Set New Marks For From One to Eight Miles, and Would Have Broken All Had He Been Pushed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A seething, tumultuous crowd of nearly 600 eager spectators jammed themselves into Madison Square Garden last night to see the bicycle races, the chief attraction being Jimmy Michael and Floyd McFarland, the midge against the giant, in a 15-mile motor-paced race.

Michael won. He smashed all previous indoor records from one mile up to eight inclusive, and his defeat of his gigantic opponent was crushing and decisive.

There are ten laps to the mile in the Garden. The midge beat McFarland by eight and a half laps, 20m. 25s.

The two got away pretty together and Michael at once took the lead. McFarland trailed close behind in the second mile. Michael's paces let out a link and while with sparks flying from their wheels they began to pull away from each other.

The gap steadily widened, and in the fifth mile, Michael was well ahead. He kept a clear lap to the good, the spectators flung themselves into a frenzy of excitement and their enthusiasm ran riot.

Michael kept up the killing work and soon led another lap to his credit.

This achievement seemed to take the heart out of McFarland and he fell away from his pace.

Chain of McFarland's Motor Broke.

To add to his misfortune the chain of his motor broke and Michael gained two more laps.

Michael's lap gaining from this point on became almost monotonously enthusiastic.

His last mile was reeled off in 1m. 20s. Michael's time was as follows:

MICHAEL SMASHED RECORDS

Set New Marks For From One to Eight Miles, and Would Have Broken All Had He Been Pushed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A seething, tumultuous crowd of nearly 600 eager spectators jammed themselves into Madison Square Garden last night to see the bicycle races, the chief attraction being Jimmy Michael and Floyd McFarland, the midge against the giant, in a 15-mile motor-paced race.

Michael won. He smashed all previous indoor records from one mile up to eight inclusive, and his defeat of his gigantic opponent was crushing and decisive.

There are ten laps to the mile in the Garden. The midge beat McFarland by eight and a half laps, 20m. 25s.

The two got away pretty together and Michael at once took the lead. McFarland trailed close behind in the second mile. Michael's paces let out a link and while with sparks flying from their wheels they began to pull away from each other.

LOCAL TRACKS PRESENT GOOD AND FAIR CARDS

KAZAN SHOULD BEAT TENNY BELLE AND MISS GOLIGHTLY AND TAKE PURSE IN FOURTH RACE.

DELMAR SELECTIONS.

First Race—Two Annes, Gratia, Miss Cooney.

Second Race—Alp, Ed L. Daniel, Third Race—Mada Bell, Lillian M., Attelle.

Fourth Race—Kazan, Tenny Belle, Miss Golightly.

Fifth Race—Stiff, Delarte, Cherry Head.

Sixth Race—Tickful, Zazel, Clonsilla.

Today's card at Delmar should insure a good day's sport.

The third and fourth races, especially, will be productive of keen contests because the entries are well balanced. A dozen ordinary nags are carded in the first race, of which Two Annes, Gratia and Miss Cooney look best. They should finish in this order.

Alp and Ed L. will fight for honors in the second event, and it is probable they will come in that way. Daniel has a good chance for the purse and he should not be worse than third.

The third race—a dash of five and a half furlongs—for four-year-olds, is a contest of winners in which figure about the same. Stone is the favorite, but he is not a fair chance. Mada Bell is improving and she should win, with Lillian M. and Attelle second and third.

On to Sard in fast time on Saturday and will win the fourth today with fair luck and a good ride. Tenny Belle should be second and Golightly third. Stiff, with only a hundred pounds up, should beat Delarte and Cherry Head will be third.

If Tickful runs as well as he did his last out, he will get the money in the last race. He should be closely pressed by Zazel and Alp, Clonsilla.

Two horses, that never faced a starter, won the first two races at Delmar on Monday. They were at long odds and Alida, in the first race, was played down from 20 to 1 to 1. She was well and craftily ridden by Mr. Barringer, but if Jockey O'Neill, who has the money on Call Back, attended to his business properly, Alida would not have won. A sixteen-year-old horse, generally conceded to be the best in the city, kept looking over his right shoulder to see who was coming along. In the meantime, Call Back stole up on her to his left and before O'Neill realized it Alida had the race won. It was a case of criminal overconfidence which cost Mr. Hayes a $200 purse and called forth some bitter criticism on O'Neill.

There was splendid racing at Delmar on Monday. The mile record was equaled by Monograph, and a new mark was made in the seven-furlong distance when Meddieson covered that route in the fast time of 1:27.

The six-furlong record was also equaled by Monograph, who won a $200 purse. Mr. J. S. Bratton, won about $200 on the afternoon's sport, having liberally backed Meddies

Wall Street Responded to the Advance
at the Opening on This Side.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—An upward movement of prices for Americans was inaugurated in London this morning, with a response here at the opening. Investors here were not up to the London party. Little General alone rising over a point. A profit of $700,000 was taken on the extent of $600,000 in the opening dealing, but advanced only a trifle.

Traders realized and the market reacted a trifle, but soon advanced again, with a good demand for American securities. The Pacific, Florida, Norfolk Western, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central, Great Northern, Canadian, Manhattan and Consolidated Copper were the leaders and rose from 1/8 to 1/2 points. General alone gained 3/4. The price of gold fell slightly, but it was higher than the deal in re-advance and gained 5/8. The premium on gold was 1/2 cent lower. Cotton and Freight rates were steady. Wheat was higher. Petroleum prices were generally lower again before the close. Stocks were dull and steady.

The local reaction was more rapid. The Union Stock and Bond exchange was very sluggish, but ruled at about the highest. Bonds were dull and steady. There was no explanation of the advance and prices are shaded except for Chicago & Alton, Reading and the 2d shift, which are unchanged.

$50 or $100 first investment. No Issues Handled Here. First-class Flour, Best Family American Wheat Co., Belleville, Kan.
